

ADAMS COUNTY LOCAL EMERGENCY PLANNING COMMITTEE

Community-wide
Approach to Preparedness
in a Hazmat Adapted Community

Hazmat-Adapted communities consist of informed and prepared citizens working together to safely coexist with hazardous materials. The focus is addressing resident safety, homes, neighborhoods, businesses, parks and open space. The more action that a community can take, the more prepared they become.

Local Emergency Planning Committee Mission

The mission of the Local Emergency Planning Committee (LEPC) is to enhance and create plans addressing the response to hazardous materials incidents, increase compliance with hazardous materials reporting requirements and continue to offer access to information on hazardous materials for the benefit of county residents, businesses and industries. The LEPC shall carry out compliance with SARA Title III and other federal, state and local requirements that meet both the letter and spirit of those requirements and that enhance and encourage a partnership among county residents, businesses and industry through an exchange of information and mutual planning.

More people live in places where hazardous materials are a risk. Communities are also becoming smarter at how to better adapt their assets to potential hazardous material risks. Living in a Risk Area means you are prepared for the next incident or spill. Is your community Hazmat-Adapted?

The Adams County LEPC was formed to ensure implementation and compliance with federal laws addressing emergency planning and community information related to these laws.

The Emergency Planning and Community Right-to-Know Act requires:

- Facilities holding threshold amounts of chemicals to report to their Local Emergency Planning Committee.
- Facilities to report spills of hazardous materials to the Local Emergency Planning Committee.
- Local Emergency Planning Committees to develop emergency preparedness programs to respond to chemical releases
